New social rented homes

Impressions of the homes under construction behind St John-at-Hackney Church on Lower Clapton Road

MORE homes for social housing are being built at a Hackney Central development thanks to a new Council grant.

Seven properties under construction behind St John-at-Hackney Church, on Lower Clapton Road, which were originally earmarked for near market rent levels, will now be available for a much lower social rent.

This is due to Islington and Shoreditch Housing Association (ISHA) being awarded more than £500,000 by the Council to support its ambition to offer tenants a more affordable option.

The grant is part of the £16 million Mayor of Hackney's Housing Challenge fund – money from Council homes sold under the Government's Right to Buy scheme – which is granted to housing associations to help them build more homes for social or living rent.

The homes that will be managed by the housing association are part of a wider project by developer Thornsett to provide a new community centre and help fund the restoration of the Grade II*-listed church.

Rising land values and changes in Government policy mean that fewer properties are expected to be built by housing associations in the borough in the next two years.

The Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, said: "It's vital that we get all parts of the housing market building genuinely affordable homes for local people if we are to make Hackney a place that works for everyone.

"The Council is playing its part by building thousands of new homes, and I'm delighted that housing associations are now taking up my challenge to ensure our borough stays somewhere that people of different backgrounds and incomes call home.

"ISHA is locally based, shares our values and has set a fantastic example of how working in partnership with the Council can deliver the social housing that is at the heart of all of our work."

> "It's vital that we get all parts of the housing market building genuinely affordable homes"

Stephen Stringer, Chair of ISHA, added: "We're delighted to receive such significant funding from the Mayor of Hackney's Housing Challenge fund. This supports us in our ambition to meet future housing needs."

Cash from sales under Right to Buy is usually reinvested in Council house building programmes wherever possible.

But restrictions placed on local authorities mean the money must be spent within three years of a sale and can only pay for 30 per cent of a new home – leaving councils to fund the remainder of the cost. Often this makes it difficult for councils to spend the money, with the Government taking the surplus.

To try and ensure this money actually benefits residents, the Mayor of Hackney's Housing Challenge will make this money available to housing associations to fund homes for social rent and living rent being delivered by March 2020, instead of being handed to the Government.

From top: A team that completed the 5K swim at London Fields Lido; Swimathon president Duncan Goodhew, centre, with swimmers; Amira Hassan, nine, celebrates her swim

ALMOST 300 people across three Hackney pools took part in this year's Swimathon to raise more than £22,500 for good causes.

The Swimathon, now in its 31st year, is the world's biggest charity swim. It took place from 27-29 April, where participants in Hackney included novice swimmers and a nine-year-old girl who swam 5km.

Amira Hassan, nine, and her 11-year-old sister Yasmin both completed 5km at London Fields Lido.

Their mother, Lynne Barry, who was born and raised in Hackney and lives close to the Lido, said: "I am over the moon and so proud of my girls. I'm going to get their names and swim times engraved into their medals.

"Not many adults could do what they did, they have proved that if you believe in yourself anything is possible."

In total, 290 swimmers participated at Kings Hall and Clissold Leisure Centres and London Fields Lido. Olympic gold-medallist and Swimathon president, Duncan Goodhew, attended the event where he celebrated with participants raising money for Cancer Research and Marie Curie.

The Swimathon team praised London Fields Lido on the great atmosphere that had been created.

They tweeted: "An amazing atmosphere yesterday at @LondonFieldLido – well done swimmers, we hope you're all wearing your medals with pride. Great to hear the Swimathon playlist blasting out."

> "I am over the moon and so proud of my girls. I'm going to get their names and swim times engraved on their medals"

The Swimathon individual challenges included 400m, 1.5km, 2.5km or 5km and the team challenges had distances of 1.5km and 5km.

There are four Council-owned pools in the borough. Under 18s, over 60s, disabled people and their carers can swim for free across the borough, all year round at Britannia Leisure Centre, Clissold Leisure Centre and Kings Hall Leisure Centre. Disabled people and their carers can also swim for free at London Fields Lido.

News in brief

Help the Windrush generation, Mayor urges Home Secretary

MAYOR Philip Glanville has called on the new Home Secretary to undo immigration policies which have led to the borough's 'Windrush generation' fearing deportation.
Between 1948 and 1971, the Government invited thousands of people from Commonwealth countries in the Caribbean to relocate to Britain to address labour shortages.
They were named the 'Windrush generation' after the ship Empire Windrush (pictured) on which the first group arrived. Despite being considered British citizens, many didn't receive formal papers. New laws which came into force with the Immigration Act 2014 have led to many recently being refused access to public services and threatened with deportation.
Hackney resident and former councillor Patrick Vernon launched an online petition urging the Government to stop deportations and offer an amnesty for those who travelled across as children. It received almost 180,000 signatures and was debated in Parliament.
Writing to Sajid Javid, who took over the Home Office last month, Mayor Glanville wrote: "To see valued members of society being treated as second class citizens by your Government has left me appalled. It is entirely without justification and the Home Office's cold approach to the enforcement of its ill-conceived 'hostile environment' immigration policies has been startlingly inhumane."
Mayor Glanville asked the Home Secretary, who pledged to review the current system, to clarify what he is doing to resolve the situation.

The mayoral and Council elections saw democracy in action

Making it count...

The count, on 4 May, saw volunteers join local government political candidates to see the results of the Council and mayoral elections

PHILIP Glanville has been re-elected as Mayor of Hackney, after securing over 65 per cent of the votes in the election on 3 May.

Local voters also elected the councillors who will represent them for the next four years.

In total, Hackney now has 52 Labour and five Conservative councillors. Labour won the three seats previously held by the Liberal Democrats in Cazenove ward and the Conservatives gained one seat previously held by Labour in Stamford Hill West. The turn-out for both elections was 37 per cent.

Mayor Glanville has been in the post since September 2016, following a by-election, which was triggered when long-standing Mayor Jules Pipe stepped down.

After the results came in Mayor Glanville said: "I'd like to thank everyone who voted for me and put their trust in me to lead the borough for another four years. It's an enormous privilege to be elected Mayor of Hackney for my first full term, and I'm looking forward to delivering the promises we made in the run up to the election.

"We've always been clear that, despite ongoing cuts to our grant from Government, we must continue to be ambitious for Hackney, be a campaigning Council and find new ways to deliver the services our residents need and deserve.

> "Our manifesto sets out exciting and radical plans for building a fairer, safer and more sustainable Hackney"

"Our manifesto sets out exciting and radical plans for building a fairer, safer and more sustainable Hackney and I am looking forward to continuing to work with Council officers, and even more importantly our diverse communities, to deliver them.

"From building 800 new Council and social rented homes to tackling air quality, to setting up a publicly owned energy company and ensuring young people can access the opportunities available across the borough, we will continue to work hard to make Hackney a place for everyone."

A new display shines a light on the history of Hackney Town Hall

A TOWN hall is more than just a building: it represents both local government and the community, and provides a public space where the two can meet.

Now an illuminating display in Hackney Town Hall's newly refurbished vaults will shed light on the building's origins and proud history.

The old town hall, which occupied the area now known as Town Hall Square, was demolished in the 1930s because it was too small, with the current building constructed behind it.

Opened in 1937, to great fanfare, then mayor of Hackney, Herbert Butler, called it a 'great dignified centre of public life'.

It was designed by architects Lanchester & Lodge, who also designed the Grade II-listed Parkinson Building in Leeds, and won a competition for the honour.

In keeping with the beautiful Art Deco architecture, most of the furniture and fittings in Hackney Town Hall were specifically designed for this new, modern civic hub.

Original plans show the spaces allocated for local government functions like paying rates, now known as Council Tax.

Important life events – such as registering a birth or a marriage – have always been marked by a visit to the town hall. Although the registrars are now based in Hackney Service Centre, people can still get married in the town hall.

To celebrate its recent refurbishment, and in keeping with the ideals of the original builders, a new permanent display has been created in the Town Hall Vaults. It highlights the separate aspects of the building, both physically and symbolically.

The three rooms focus on the building itself, its representation as the symbolic centre of civic pride, and its function as a home of local democracy.

12-year restoration are included in the display.

Many of the original features had not been touched throughout the town hall's history, and 1930s era technology remained untouched for decades. For example, a central vacuum system, which is built into the walls.

The town hall was designed as a place for people to be proud of.

That pride is also symbolised in the regalia worn by the mayors of Shoreditch and Stoke Newington, which only became part of the London Borough of Hackney in 1965. The public can admire the chains of office and maces in all their early 20th century glory.

The old Hackney chain and mace have been updated with a new coat of arms, and are still in use today by The Speaker of Hackney.

Part of the exhibition is dedicated to the work of the Council and the ways in which residents are able to influence its policies.

Designed to be used by schools, pupils will be able to learn more about voting in local elections and other ways in which their voices can be heard, such as campaigning or signing petitions.

The Town Hall Vaults will be officially opened for London History Day on 31 May.

Hackney

Hackney is one of the most diverse places in the UK. In this regular feature, we profile the borough's great & good or just plain interesting

Making a splash

By Harriet Worsley

NOAH Williams is one of the youngest members of the Team England diving squad, counts Tom Daley among his closest acquaintances, and has just returned from the Commonwealth Games with a silver medal.

The 17-year-old from Hoxton says: "I've got my A-levels coming up. I'm hoping it'll all work out, but at the moment, it's a bit complicated to organise."

Lots of teenagers find the challenge of rolling out of bed for revision a daunting prospect. For Noah, however, things are a little more complex. "I'm going to be in China for the Diving World Cup next month," he explains. "I may have to sit my exams in a random Chinese school somewhere…"

Luckily, he is no stranger to hard work. "I was about nine years old when I first started diving," he explains. "My mum is a gymnastics coach, so I was already doing that, and swimming."

At school, he saw a leaflet for London's top diving school, Crystal Palace Diving. The club was conducting what's known as a talent testing.

Noah went along, and coaches spotted his potential. There was only one problem: Crystal Palace is an hour's commute from his home in Hoxton. As Noah grew older and his true talent emerged, his training schedule grew more demanding.

Noah says: "By the time I was in Year 9, I was doing three-and-a-half hours every day. Two hours in the pool, an hour and a half in the dry gym, then an hour's journey on either side…"

> "Through diving, I've travelled to new places, met new people, learnt new things"

He would fit all of this in after a full school day, while his friends were hanging out at home. But, he says, he has never felt like he was missing out. Quite the opposite: "I'm always busy," he says. "Through diving, I've travelled to new places, met new people, learnt new things."

Noah received numerous grants from the Council's Youth Sport Fund, which helps talented young athletes with the costs of training and competing. He has also been a winner at the Hackney Sports Awards for the past six years.

As well as support from the Council, Noah credits the support of his parents: "I think they had a lot to do with keeping me focused on the positives. They would say: 'just try. Try and don't give up'."

It proved valuable advice. In 2014, Noah made his first attempt to qualify for Team GB. "I messed up pretty bad," he recalls. "I slipped on the board and didn't get through."

Failure, however, made him realise just how much he wanted to compete at the very top of his sport. So he picked himself up and began training even harder.

"It was hard," he says, "working for months without even knowing if it would come to anything."

Next time, however, he didn't slip. In fact, he sailed through the qualifications and straight into a career as one of the top men's platform divers in the country.

Today, Noah trains at the London Aquatics Centre, a commute that is a huge improvement on his days of travelling back and forth to Crystal Palace: "It's amazing having these facilities practically on our doorstep," he says. "Plus, now I'm in sixth form college, they've arranged my schedule around my diving, so I can be there twice a day, for two hours each session."

At the Olympic pool, he trains alongside Tom Daley, which, he says, "is great, because watching him gives you a real goal to work towards."

Last month, both men were in Australia's Gold Coast for the Commonwealth Games. When Tom was forced to withdraw from the men's 10-metre platform diving event for health reasons, Noah was added to the line-up. "I just wanted to do my best for everyone," he says.

In fact, he did far more than that. He finished fourth in the final. Better yet, when he and his dive partner Matt Dixon competed in the synchronised 10-metre board, they won a silver medal right behind Tom, who secured gold.

"Yeah, it felt pretty good," he says. Noah is diving into a bright future.

Curriculum Vitae: Noah Williams

THE GREEN GENIE

All your green questions answered

Q: Many shops in Hackney are using brown paper bags that seem slightly plasticised. Do you know if we can put these in our recycling bin?

A: I can't be 100 per cent sure without seeing the bags you mean, but the 'scrunch test' should give you a good indication. Scrunch it up, and if it stays scrunched up it's OK to recycle. If it unscrunches itself then it needs to go in the rubbish bin.

It's bin emotional...

Catherine Rogerson with the recycling crew and her certificate for 'most improved recycler in Hackney'

A RECYCLING crew from the Council has helped a resident become a better recycler – as a wedding present for her husband.

When it came to recycling, Catherine Rogerson admitted that she didn't always get it right, much to the annoyance of her husband-to-be, Thomas Yarrow.

She said: "Tom goes out of his way every Sunday to try and make our rubbish and recycling as easy as possible for the Council to collect.

"We have three bins in our kitchen and he runs a tight ship. He is often disappointed at how little attention I pay the recycling system."

> "My husband Tom loved his gift. His groomsmen absolutely loved it too!"

Catherine wanted to show Tom that she would become a better recycler and asked the Council for advice. She also asked if she could take some photos with the crew that collects her recycling every week to prove that she has been learning how to recycle properly.

Environmental Operations Manager, Glen Whitby, came to her house and showed her what to recycle and what to throw away. As an extra surprise, the team took her on a shift to show her what it involves, and presented her with a 'most improved recycler in Hackney' certificate, taking photos to show to Tom on their wedding day.

Catherine said: "He loved his gift. His groomsmen absolutely loved it, too! I'd like to thank Glen and his team for their help and for making this present possible.

"My work mates are just in awe at how accommodating they all were."

You'd better be swift to catch sight of these birds

SWIFTS are beautiful migrant birds that arrive in Hackney in May and leave in August.

During this time they nest in gaps in roofs and under eaves in older properties around the borough. However, with the refurbishment of older properties and a lack of nesting space in modern buildings, swifts are gradually disappearing from Hackney's skies.

A group of volunteers, Hackney Swifts, aim to reverse this trend by mapping and conserving swift nest sites, raising awareness of swifts and creating new swift nest sites in the borough.

Hamish Burnett, from Hackney Swifts, said: "Swifts entertain us in summer with their rooftop aerobatics and high-pitched evening calls, and also help to get rid of biting insects, which they feed on.

"They only land to breed, so most swifts here will only ever touch down in Hackney throughout their whole lives, despite spending more than half the year in central Africa."

Hackney Swifts is inviting residents to go on a Summer Swifts Walk.

The walkers will meet at The Star pub, by Hackney Downs, on 21 June, and walk to The Royal Sovereign pub, in Stoke Newington. The walk will take place from 7.30-9pm.

The suggested donation is £5 for The Garden Classroom, a charity which provides children and adults with stimulating outdoor experiences.

Numbers are limited on the walk, so residents are advised to book in advance by e-mailing: debeauvoirswifts@gmail.com; or following: @hackney_swifts on Twitter.

Chefs in schools

A NEW charity, supported by some of the country's leading foodies, has launched in Hackney.

Called Chefs in Schools, the charity is the brainchild of Leon co-founder and Hackney resident Henry Dimbleby. He is joined by Gayhurst Community School's executive chef Nicole Pisani (pictured above) and executive headteacher of the Leap Federation of Schools, Louise Nichols.

Their idea is simple but ambitious: put 100 restaurant-trained chefs in 100 school kitchens by 2023.

Nicole has been working at Gayhurst, E8, since 2013, after Henry posted a tweet asking whether anyone would be interested in taking over the primary school's kitchen. Though head chef at acclaimed Soho restaurant Nopi at the time, Nicole took the job.

> "The children are tougher than any restaurant critic I've come across!"

She said: "The world we live in today is so obsessed with food. We have access to any kind of food we wish during any season and Instagram every meal – but in schools what we serve and teach our children does not mirror that.

"I felt compelled to create a change. It's more challenging than any restaurant kitchen I've worked in and the children are tougher than any restaurant critic I've come across!"

The school now cooks all meals from scratch, setting out salads on the pupils' tables and baking fresh bread daily. Nicole has also taken charge of the cooking curriculum, teaching pupils to butcher whole chickens and cook over fire pits in the playground.

Her model has since been adopted by three other Hackney schools – Mandeville Primary, E5, Rushmore Primary, E5, and Kingsmead School, E9. The charity now wants to reach pupils across the country.

Henry said: "Ensuring that every child eats well in school, develops a healthy relationship with food and learns to cook savoury dishes from scratch must be part of the solution.

"What Nicole and Louise have done at Gayhurst is extraordinary, and I am thrilled to be able to help spread that experience so that more children can benefit from it."

News in brief

Top pupil progress in schools

TWO Hackney schools have been lauded for their exceptional performances, putting them in the top 20 per cent of all schools in the country.

Clapton Girls' Academy, E5, and Our Lady's Convent High School, N16, (pictured) both won an Educational Outcomes Award for their results last year. The awards use data from the Department of Education and Ofsted to measure the performance of all state-funded schools in England.

Once analysed by the Schools, Students and Teachers network (SSAT), Our Lady's and Clapton Girls' were found to be among the top 20 per cent of schools nationally when it came to the progress made by their pupils.

Sue Williamson, Chief Executive of SSAT, said: "SSAT is pleased to recognise the quality of leadership and the hard work of all staff to ensure the success of every child. A big thank you and well done to pupils, parents, staff and governors."

Podcast brings English alive

A NEW podcast recorded on Mare Street is bringing GCSE texts alive, with the help of rappers and opera directors.

Teachers Maud Millar and Olivia Hanson were granted funding from Kings College London to create a national education resource for GCSE English.

Called 'Lit', their podcast features interviews with young professionals from all walks of life who have been inspired by GCSE literature texts.

"Our guests so far have included Grace Campbell, a Channel 4 comedian, Love Ssega, a singer-songwriter and rapper and Jack Furness, an opera and theatre director," said Maud. "The idea is to makes them funny, engaging and accessible to all. We want to reach as many kids as possible in the run-up to exams."

Hackney pupils speak out in Jack Petchey challenge

AROUND 500 Hackney students participated in a public speaking competition to become the regional 'Speak Out' challenge champion.

The Year 10 pupils received a one-day public speaking and communications training workshop, funded by the Jack Petchey Foundation and designed by charity Speakers Trust.

During the course students were given the skills to develop and deliver a competition speech on a topic important to them.

The regional final took place at Haggerston School on 1 May. Jean Kossoko-Ormerod, 15, from Mossbourne Community Academy scooped top prize of a £100 gift certificate and the chance to go to the final of the competition on 2 July.

Jean impressed the judges with a winning speech entitled 'Outside the box' where he talked about autism. He said: "All of this is amazing – I realised that I made the crowd laugh but I never imagined for a second winning!"

Second Place went to Lisandr Qose, 15, from Mossbourne Victoria Park Academy with his speech 'Denied', and third place to Chidinma Ejimonye, 14, from Our Lady's Convent with her speech 'F.R.I.E.N.D.S'.

Hackney's pupils of the past put on a smart show

AMONG the 150,000 negatives in Ron Gibson's collection held at Hackney Archives are thousands of studio portraits, including these very smart students.

The photographs date from the 1970s, but along with the vast majority of other images in the collection from that decade the names of those in the photos have been lost.

Staff at Hackney Archives would love to hear from anyone who recognises the pupils or their uniforms.

The Gibson collection of photos represents an important part of the borough's history in the post-war period.

Hackney Archives is undertaking a two-year project to digitise 150,000 negatives taken by the studio between 1952 and 1978. Staff are also collecting and preserving the stories of people who had their photograph taken by Gibson.

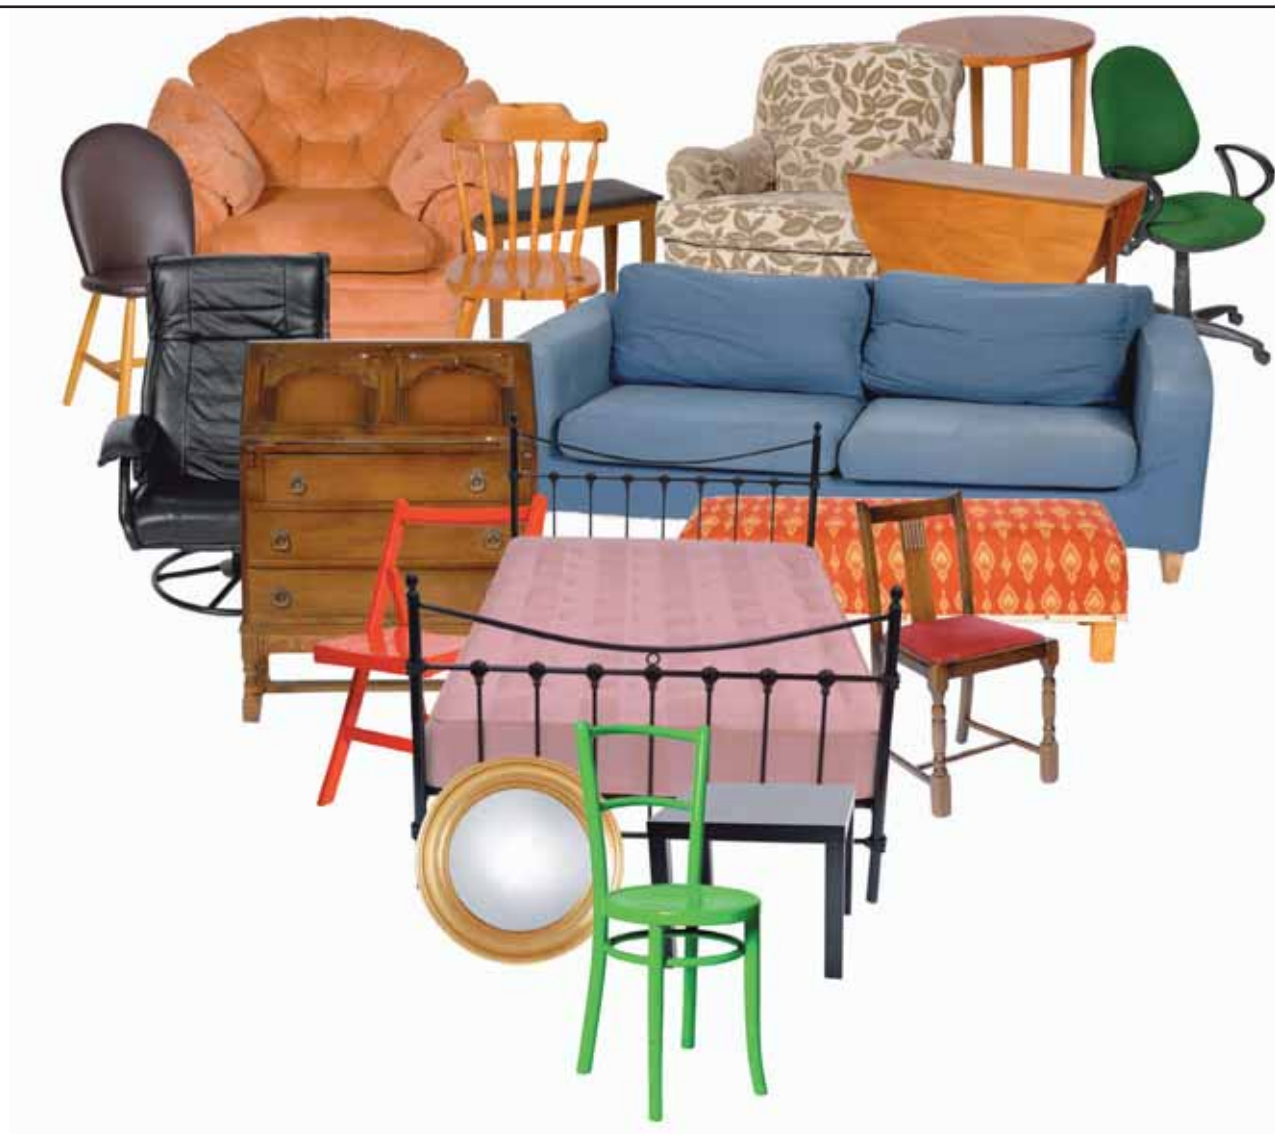

Many of the photographs are not labelled or dated and archives staff are trying to identify as many people as possible.

See more photos taken by Gibson online at Flickr (search 'Hackney Archives') and on the archives' Facebook page.

An exhibition of Gibson's photos is set to open at Hackney Museum on 22 May.

MORE INFO

Hackney Archives will be featuring photographs from the Gibson collection in each edition of Hackney Today. If you recognise anyone in the photos, call: 020 8356 8925; or e-mail: archives@hackney.gov.uk

Tea dance will launch borough's first ever Dementia Arts Festival

A tea dance at Shoreditch Town Hall will launch Hackney's first Dementia Arts Festival. Below: Events include disability swimming sessions

THE borough's first Dementia Arts Festival launches this month, featuring many free events for people with dementia and their families, carers and friends.

Taking place from 21-25 May, during Dementia Action Week, the festival is set to launch with a tea dance on 21 May at Shoreditch Town Hall.

Other activities during the week include board games, walks, swimming, dementia-friendly film screenings, singing, art exhibitions and a memory bank workshop where residents can explore their memories and emotions.

The festival is part of the ongoing work to make Hackney a dementia-friendly borough.

About 1,300 people are currently living with dementia in the borough. With an ageing population, the rate of dementia is set to increase, along with demand for local dementia-friendly services.

Sandra Cater, Dementia Friendly Community Coordinator in Hackney, said: "All of the events and activities have been especially designed for people with dementia in mind. It is really important that people with dementia feel included and involved in their community."

News in brief

Positive wellbeing the focus of Mental Health Awareness Week

RESIDENTS are being encouraged to take steps to improve their wellbeing as part of Mental Health Awareness Week, which runs from 14-20 May.

This year's focus is on managing stress, which if left unmanaged can lead to serious mental and physical health conditions. As part of the campaign, the Council and City and Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group are promoting five steps to better mental health. These are: connecting with others, being active, taking notice, to keep learning and to give back.

During Mental Health Awareness Week, City and Hackney Mind is set to run mindfulness group sessions and yoga in Dalston Eastern Curve Garden, on 16 May, from 6-9pm.

Richmond Road Medical Centre is set to host a Healthy Mind event, which will feature over 30 health and wellbeing services, on 17 May, from 2-6pm. For more info, visit: richmondroadmedicalcentre.nhs.uk

Where there's a knit, there's a number one hit

By Trae James

RESIDENTS living at a retirement development in Hackney have found that a regular knit and natter group is helping them in the fight against loneliness and isolation.

The fortnightly meetings of the Lea View Social Club help people aged 58 to 96 share ideas and catch up on the latest gossip over a cup of tea and a ball of wool.

During a recent visit Diane Abbott, MP for Hackney North and Stoke Newington, was even treated to a serenade from 79-year-old resident Laurence Jeffrey, who sang 'Here In My Heart' by Al Martino – the number one song in the first ever UK singles chart in 1952.

Pat Black, the Hanover Housing Association estate manager, came up with the idea. He said: "It has been an exhilarating and rewarding experience to see how the club has touched the lives of residents. "

Resident Jennifer Thomas, added: "Knitting has been called the new yoga – it's calming, helps focus the mind, and is a great way to improve my hand coordination."

Diane Abbott MP met residents from the knit and natter group at the Lea View Social Club recently

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2018.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2018. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall.

To book an appointment, e-mail: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3269. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Soraya Adejare.

A healthy eating programme from Shoreditch Trust

www.shoreditchtrust.org.uk

SHOREDITCH Trust's Food For Life Programme works with members of the community to encourage affordable healthy eating, cooking skills and food knowledge.
In this side summer green salad, peas are a great source of vitamins and minerals, as well as being a source of plant-based protein and dietary fibre. Frozen peas are a convenient and quick way to add more vegetables to your diet. This salad is a hit in the family cook and eat classes. Children love the mild, creamy flavours and the crunchy lettuce. The salad makes a great accompaniment to grilled meat or fish or can be eaten with hummus and wholemeal pitta bread as a lunch or snack.

Summer green salad

Serves 4-6 as a side

Preparation time
15 mins

Cooking time
5 mins

Ingredients

- 200g peas, fresh or frozen
- 100g broad beans, frozen
- 1 avocado
- 100g fresh green leaves (rocket, spinach, watercress, lettuce)

Dressing

- 150g yoghurt or tahini (2 tbs and 2 tbs water)
- Zest of half a lemon and 2 tsps of juice
- 1/2 garlic clove - finely chopped/ minced
- 15 fresh mint leaves - finely chopped
- 1 tsp of honey
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper

Topping suggestion

- 2 tbs of sesame seeds, pumpkin or sunflower seeds.

Method

- Simmer the peas and broad beans in hot water for 3 mins, cool with cold water, drain and set aside
- Mix all the dressing ingredients together and refrigerate
- Place the seeds into a dry frying pan on a medium heat. Fry until they start to turn golden. Turn the heat off immediately when their colour changes as they continue to cook in a hot pan and burnt sesame seeds taste bitter
- In a salad bowl add the green leaves and sliced avocado Mix through the beans, peas and dressing
- Sprinkle on the toasted sesame seeds and serve.
